BUSH WINS!

HAS "GREAT EXPECTORATIONS"

Deep In The Heart of Texas (WIN) As the prairie dust lazily settles into the sinking sun, America has finally elected Junior George W. Bush as President. The formerly appointed President surprisingly won both the popular and even more unexpectedly, Electoral College vote without the help of the US Supreme Court.

A jubilant Bush, wrapped in his standard campaign uniform (left) cheered on his supporters while simultaneously demonstrating his excellent multitasking capabilities by oppressing the downtrodden. When asked what he was going to do now, the self-described "emboliant" President shouted, "I'm banning abortionists and going to Disneyland! I have great expectorations of things I can do to America in the next, uh, what is it...four or five years of presidenting the county." Whitehouse officials quickly attempted to "clarify" the Presidents comments explaining that Mr. Bush was actually going to Disneyworld, which is in the heartland of America (Florida).

Vice President Cheney, speaking from an unknown bunker... err, location, is reported to be overjoyed at the prospect of running the country (and issuing no-bid contracts to Halliburton) for four more years. Rumours persist that governance of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, and Washington DC will be awarded to Halliburton due to "obvious mismanagement of voter rights - I mean they did vote against us." Supreme Court Justice Scalia has privately assured the Vice President that the court would not intervene in this "crucial matter of national security."

Hints of the President's Agenda for 2005-2008?

(Note: These are actual Bush quotes)

My pro-life position is I believe there's life. It's not necessarily based in religion. I think there's a life there, therefore the notion of life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness.

Redefining the role of the United States from enablers to keep the peace to enablers to keep the peace from peacekeepers is going to be an assignment.

I am mindful of the difference between the executive branch and the legislative branch. I assured all four of these leaders that I know the difference, and that difference is they pass the laws and I execute them.

They underestimated me.

I think if you know what you believe, it makes it a lot easier to answer questions. I can't answer your question.

And of course, Our Iraq policy has been a "catastrophic success".

Older, Wiser John Kerry Contemplates Life Outside the Lincoln Bedroom

Middle Earth..err, somewhere in Canada (WIN) Retiring to the ever shrinking Middle Kingdom, John Kerry is spending time reflecting upon his defeat. After only 48 of reflection, a highly relieved Kerry admits to the WIN his happiness at his defeat to the dark lords of Halliburton... err Bush.

" I mean look at all the mess that Bush has gotten the US into. Did I really want to have to deal with Iraq, record budget deficits, polarization of the populace, rising unemployment, and that awful 'Yellow Rose of Texas' paint job of the Whitehouse living quarters? Hell NO! My wife's gotta a billion dollars in the bank, I've still got a cushy job in the Senate, err, unlike my former running mate John Edwards, that gives Theresa and I great healthcare benefits and then there are those congressional junkets... I mean I get paid to go to great places like the Bahamas and Winnipeg! Naw, I just can't figure out why I ever wanted it in the first place . I mean during one tour of duty in the Whitehouse I probably would have picked up another half-dozen purple hearts and maybe even a silver star or two. Nope, I'm glad George got it... But I do hope it drives him to drink (wink, wink)."

Whitehouse Renovations

"It's Ours!"

In Junior Bush's first news conference following his reelection, he announced that, since he and Laura would be hanging around another 4 years, he had contracted with the TLC show Trading Spaces to do a 48 hour makeover of the symbol of the American Presidency. The WHN was there as the new W-House was unveiled.

UPDATE: When polled, ~49% of TLC viewers said they did not like the renovation changes made by Hildi.

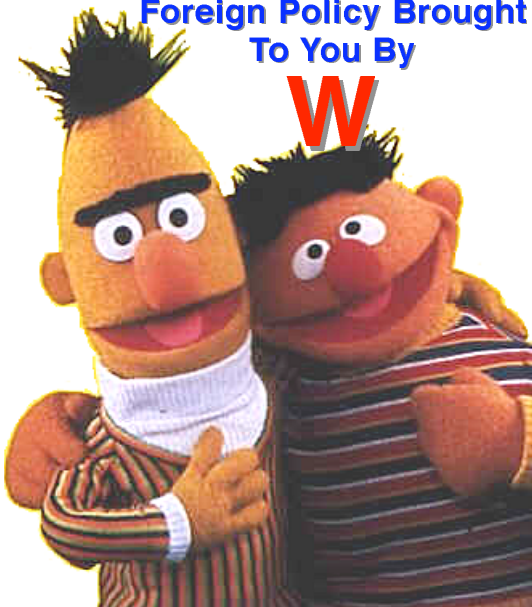

Is Colin Powell On The Way Out?

Does the Whitehouse Have New Foreign Policy Experts

In The Heart of Texas (WHN) In an attempt to impart understandable foreign policy facts to the President, Whitehouse insiders report that Condoleezza Rice has recruited a new team of foreign policy experts that have been specially trained to deal with individuals of Mr. Bush's intellectual capacity. While the identity of these individuals has been a closely guarded secret, WHN Whitehouse correspondent Ned Ander-Thal captured a photo (left) of the experts as they entered the Texas Whitehouse.

Foreign Policy Brought To You By

W

Confidential sources confided to the WHN that on the advice of these experts, Whitehouse foreign policy will be centered entirely on the principle of "W". Insiders report that this revolutionary policy concept was derived by the frequent refrain heard within the Whitehouse of "Poppy, What should W do?"

A Key feature of "W" is that all foreign policy decisions must begin with the letter "w". Some concern has been expressed by, as phrased by the Whitehouse, Girlie Men Democrats that this may limit America's options. Disgraced Senator John Kerry stated, "I used the Oxford English Dictionary, I also speak French you know, and about the only "W" options I found were war, weapons, war-ship, wallop, wacko, wanton, warlike, warpath, wealthy and, eerily foreshadowing, Waterloo." Whitehouse spokesman Scott McClellan derided Senator Kerry by simply stating "W wondered what wa waskly wabbit would wordify."

UN Moves To Prevent Civil War
 In North America!
Bold Partitioning Plan

Winnipeg (WIN) Due to recent events south of the border, many US citizens expressed interest to the United Nations about relocating their families, or in some cases their entire state, to Canada. Because of the extreme lobbying of these “displaced citizens” the UN has rushed through the General Assembly a new Partitioning plan for the North American continent north of the Rio Grande. Representatives from North Korea, South Korea, Bosnia, Serbia, Croatia, the Congo and the country formerly known as North and South Vietnam were tasked with the defining the continent's geopolitical boundaries based on ideological and tribal (i.e., blue versus red state) loyalties.

Canada, being a good international sport, agreed with the UN to accept the blue states. However, in exchange for accepting these states, Canada insisted that they be awarded the color “maple red”. George Bush, representing the “formerly red” states, agreed to this demand provided they got “US currency green” and got to choose “a really cool name like Jesusland”. While North Korea initially balked at this demand, cooler heads (and are not all heads cooler in Canada) prevailed upon the North Koreans to accede to the demands of the President of Jesusland (in exchange for several tons of rice, safe nuclear technology, and a free pass to Universal Studios - but not the one in Jesusland - for Kim Jong Il).

While the plan has been accepted by the UN General Assembly, some concerns exist that one of the permanent members of the UN Security Council may veto the move. France is insisting that Quebec be given to it in exchange for supporting the Partitioning plan. This may work with the compromise color scheme as France has expressed it’s willingness to accept “blue” which has been abandoned by the former blue states which are now part of the United States of Canada.
